Wet FeltingBy BarbaraLynThis book is definitely not what I thought it would be. To me, felting was taking fibers of wool and "punching" it (like the threadless sewing machines are made for). Not this felting. Yes, you still use the wool roving but instead of punching, you lay it out and crisscross it with another layer of wool roving. Then you work soapy water through the material. Of course, there is more to the actual process but you can read that for yourself in the book. Once, the felt is created, you can follow some of the projects just as you would a regular sewing project. Others are created using more soapy water. Either way, you have cute objects for baby. Create a mobile for over the crib or soft blocks or balls for the new member of your family to play with. Soft sided toy boxes, cubes or totes are always welcome as a shower gift as well as a toy bus or pony. Hair pins, wastebaskets or even a pair of slippers can be created with this process. For the more grown up child, you can create pillows or candle covers or a make up bag and even a desk set for the young teen in your life. For those of us that don't wish to make our own felt, some of the projects can be created with purchased felt. The instructions are clearly written with graphics to show the way to cut the felt. 44 projects in 4 collections (baby, princess, love and cool), there is sure to be several that appeal to you. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Very Cute Projects By tmtrvlr What a fun way to create toys and useful items for children! This book starts by showing you how to create your own felted wool fabric. With some raw wool, a few tools (one of which is bubble wrap), and eighteen photographs to show the process, the book clearly explains how to make felted fabric. At the end of the book there is a page of resources for the raw wool if it is not readily available. Of course, you can also purchase the felt to make the designs in the book. For babies, there are patterns for items like balls, blocks, pillows, cars, a mobile and much more. For older children there are bags, boxes, a floor runner, and toys. There are big beautiful and colorful pictures for each of the projects. The projects would not only be fun to make, but also fun to work on with your children or grandchildren.

Let Gry and Sif take you to the wonderful world of wet felting! The two sisters are well known for their appealing designs made of felted wool.
